FRIDAY, AUGUST 26, 1921.

An optimist is the man who combs a few stray hairs across a bald head.

The show with the undressed girls enables them, at least, to make a bare living.

This canning season the dollar is getting a heap more mileage out of the sugar barrel.

Almost cool enough to revive the jokes on renewal of acquaintance with the overcoat.

If you forget where the talkative barber left off, it is possible to find out many times by feeling.

Getting near the time when men will put on heavier clothes and women discard their summe furs.

Bernhardt will make another farewell tour of America next year and may then announce when she will make the next one.

It is suspected that nature made a serious mistake when she provided only a few weeks of sweet corn on the cob and a whole year of hamburger steak.

THE COST OF PROGRESS

From the days of Columbus up to the present day the fight has been on to conquer the ocean and the air and thousands of lives have been lost in the train of progress.

The destruction of the giant dirigible a few days ago resulting in the death of numbers of men serves to impress upon the world the precious cost of the progress of the world. These men who gave their lives in their effort to conquer the air are truly martyrs to progress and not just casualties of every day life.
Thousands of lives have already been sacrificed in the effort to navigate the air and no doubt many more lives will be sacrificed before it is made safe for general use, yet such is the cost of modern day progress.

Nothing is ever accomplished without sacrifice of some kind, be it in the every day life of man, or be it in the sciences.
The man who goes out to conquer business and accumulate a fortune has many sacrifices to make, as has the religious missionary who goes out into the heathen lands to save souls. Often the one loses his soul in the struggle, while the latter may lose his life and find his soul.
All life is a battle and struggle and sacrifice, but these sacrifices are justified and must be made if the world is to advance.

THE CAUSE FOR WHICH THEY FOUGHT

The reunion of the North Carolina Confederate veterans now being held in Durham recalls to us the glory of those far off days of sixty-one-sixty-five when the flower of the South was in arms in a cause which they believed to be right, and a cause which to this day is being more and more abused that of State's rights. While no one in these latter days believes a state should have the right to secede from the Union, for we are now, and will be for all time, insolubly one, Americans all, yet there is too much encroachment on states rights and too much centering and centralization in the national government. Gradually one state's rights after another is taken away and centralized in Washington.

The founders of this great nation in its conception did not intend that all rights should be taken from the individual states but that they should be supreme within their own borders and that the Washington government should only have control and jurisdiction over what affected the country as a whole and would not interfere with affairs of the separate states. It is a dangerous tendency and unless checked will result in a centralized monarchical form of government in the end.

PEANUT PICKERS!

If you are in need of a Peanut Picker, it is not wise to buy a new machine that has not been thoroughly tested.

The BENTHALL has been in use for years and years, and has proven to be all right for picking the large peanuts, also for picking the Spanish nuts.

We are now taking orders for BENTHALL peanut pickers.
